

Abstract

This diploma thesis Reimbursement of costs in trial proceedings and enforcement proceedings describes the main aspects related to reimbursement of costs in the two kinds of civil procedure. Reimbursement of costs is seen as a secondary topic, but can cause serious property issues to the parties. The purpose of this thesis is to provide a comprehensive look at the issue of reimbursement of costs in trial and enforcement proceedings.

The thesis is composed of an introduction, two main sections which are dealing with reimbursement of costs in trial proceedings and reimbursement of costs in the enforcement proceedings and conclusion. In the introduction I'm dealing with the reasons why I've chosen this topic.

The actual text of the thesis is divided into two main parts - reimbursement of costs in trial proceedings and reimbursement of costs in the enforcement proceedings.

The first part deals with selected kinds of costs, with an emphasis on case law, and also deals with the issues connected with the abolition of regulation No. 484/2000 Coll. Within subchapters 1.2 and 1.3 I analyze reimbursement of costs in the contentious and non-contentious proceedings, individual principles governing the reimbursement of costs and institutes related to reimbursement, specifically pre-action appeal and the discretionary power of the court. Further I describe the judgments as well as remedies directed against such decisions, with emphasis on the appeal.

The second part is divided into two main subsections - reimbursement of costs in the enforcement proceedings under Part Six of the Code of Civil Procedure and reimbursement of costs in the enforcement proceedings under the Enforcement Regulations. Emphasis is placed on enforcement proceedings, which I analyze in section 2.2. Here I'm generally dealing with different kinds of costs of enforcement proceedings, the reimbursement of costs in the enforcement proceedings, including compensation costs for discontinuance of the proceedings, the decisions on costs and permissible remedies. In conclusion I evaluate my findings and I express my opinion on the matter.
